

CBORD® introduces enhanced functionality for CS Access™ door access control system

Enhancements reflect customer requests for improving campus security

Friday, August 24, 2007

Ithaca, NY: The CBORD Group, Inc., the leading provider of campus card and integrated security solutions to the college and university community, is pleased to announce the addition of several new features to CS Access™, the company's leading IP-based access control system. Development was dedicated in light of recent customer requests for assistance in improving the level of security on their campuses.

New and enhanced features include campus lockdown and emergency lockdown capabilities; enhanced history tracking for financial and access transactions; site-wide messaging on point-of-sale readers, access readers, vending readers, and account management websites; and housing triggers which allow students access only to doors necessary in order to reach their specific residence hall rooms during campus emergencies.

These features build upon CS Access' existing capabilities that make it a leading door access control solution in the college and university marketplace. These include graphical mapping of locations and alarms, integration with intelligent video surveillance, and powerful connectivity with campus card and housing management software for a true campus-wide solution.

"With campus security on the minds of many, we are more than willing to step up development efforts to assist our customers in securing their campuses," says Mathew Birnbaum, Business Manager, Integrated Security Solutions, The CBORD Group, Inc. "By providing security solutions that are deeply integrated with other campus-wide technologies, CBORD can help universities manage complex security issues quickly and thoroughly. Any enhancements we are able to provide to better serve this purpose are top priorities."
